Elysium is a stylish, traditional narrowboat which was fitted out to a particularly high specification by Reading Marine in 1996. She was refurbished in 2007 and had a complete exterior repaint in 2016. Elysium was the subject of a canal boat magazine review when first built,

From the bow, you enter a spacious saloon with a solid fuel stove and ample storage and shelving space, there are four windows making it light and airy. There is an L-shaped seating and dining area that converts to a double bed. Large and small interchangeable tables are stored along the side.

The good size galley with side hatch has ample work-space with attractive red worktops, a recently installed stainless-steel sink/drainer with a mixer tap, four burner hob and there are white limed oak cupboards and drawers under. The oven/grill is at eye level with a drawer and fridge under.

The bathroom has a three-quarter hip bath with shower over and marble effect tiling, basin with window above and a Mansfield pump out toilet with three cupboards to the side.

The extending double fixed berth has over bed cupboard, shelving and two windows either side.

Steps from the fixed berth go up to a clean and tidy back cabin which includes ample storage cupboards and lockers and leads to the aft deck
